

NOW USE LACTATED FOOD.

Healthy Babies Ought to Gain Steadily in Weight in August—Four Things Needed to Make Baby Thrive.

August for some babies is a fearful struggle for existence. An infant needs pure air, proper food, cleanliness and careful attention.

A healthy baby should gain steadily in weight in August as well as in other months. When an infant has cut its first tooth and does not thrive as a healthy child should; when it grows pale and fretful, throws up its food in undigested masses, the first thing the practiced doctor will advise is lactated food.

Experience has shown that babies gain most steadily in weight and size when put on a diet of lactated food. The use of lactated food has made cholera infantum and summer diarrhoea troubles no longer a matter of fear in thousands of homes.

Lactated food agrees with babies when every other nutriment is refused. After a day or two the puny child put on a diet of lactated food shows a decided gain in vigor and liveliness and there soon follows a rapid increase in weight and size.

Lactated food is so absolutely free from any possibility of contamination and is so rich in everything that bone, body and muscle need to grow on that babies regularly fed on lactated food develop in every limb and part in a way that delights the heart and eyes of mothers.

Keep lactated food steadily at hand. It will remove the anxiety of summer diarrhoea and dangerous weakness.

THE STRIKE INVESTIGATION

Messrs Howard and Sovereign Before the National Commission.

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—The strike commissioners appointed by President Cleveland to investigate the Pullman and railroad strike began work yesterday. The sessions were held in the government building in a court room and attracted many spectators.

Vice President S. W. Howard, of the American Railway union, was called as the first witness. "Tell us what, in your opinion, caused the railroad strikes," said Commissioner Kernan.

"The strikes were caused," answered Mr. Howard, "by the statement of the general managers that they would back up Mr. Pullman during the strike."

"Who told you that?" "The newspapers printed the statement, crediting to General Managers Egan and St. Johns."

Mr. Howard then entered into an exhaustive recital of the troubles leading up to the Pullman strike. "The General Managers' association," he said, "refused to haul mail cars unless the Pullmans were attached to the trains. Such action was entirely uncalled for. The Pullmans were in no wise necessary for the transmission of the United States mails. I can cite various cases when mail trains were run without Pullman coaches or other palace car equipment."

"Was the action of your union in the strike," asked Commissioner Wright, "merely for the protection of the interests of the Pullman employees?" "No, not entirely," said Howard. "The general managers had organized against us, and we had to protect ourselves."

"Were you aware," asked Judge Worthington, "that the railroads had contracts with the Pullman company?" "We were, and we were also aware that those contracts were a violation of the interstate law. They allowed the carrying of none but Pullman sleepers and were a direct discrimination against the Wagner cars."

Mr. Howard told the commissioners that he had received a communication from the state committee on safety telling of a conversation between two rioters which had been overheard. The conversation was a dispute over money which the men claimed to have received from General Manager Egan for overturning and burning railroad cars during the strike. He reluctantly admitted that the fact that lawless men frequently seize the opportunity to riot during labor troubles is an argument against strikers.

Mr. Howard was followed by General Master Workman Sovereign, of the Knights of Labor, who described the A. R. U. and the K. of L. as "two divisions of one army."

Appeal from the Examining Board.

The French President's Assassin Guillotined at Lyons.

WALKED TREMBLINGLY TO DEATH.

The Cowardly Anarchist Had to be Assisted to the Scaffold, Though with a Supreme Effort He Cried with His Last Breath, "Vive L'Anarchie!"

LYONS, Aug. 16.—The news of the decision to execute Sauto early this morning spread rapidly, notwithstanding the efforts of the officials to keep it secret. A heavy fall of rain had prevented the gathering of a great crowd around the prison, but all the wine shops and restaurants in the vicinity were crowded all last evening with people who proposed to witness the execution. At midnight, however, these people were compelled to leave their places of shelter, as the tavern keepers had strict orders to close their doors at that hour.

The streets leading to the prison were occupied by troops. At 1 o'clock all the houses on the streets were closed, and no person was allowed to enter them unless he could prove that it was his own place of residence. This precaution was to prevent any attempts at violence on the part of the anarchists.

The city was so crowded with visitors who came to be present at the execution that Diebler, the official executioner, after several hours of fruitless search for lodgings was obliged to invoke the aid of the authorities to procure quarters. Owing to various hitches the guillotine did not arrive from Paris until 6 o'clock last evening.

The people appeared to rejoice at the approaching end of the detested assassin. Sauto appeared to be unconscious of his speedy fate. His demeanor has been stolid. He occupied his time yesterday in reading "Don Quixote," which he never finished.

At 1 o'clock this morning the police commenced to clear the people away from the vicinity of the prison. When the troops marched to the square in which the execution took place hardly a score of onlookers were in it.

The Municipal Guards during the past two days and last night have been engaged specially in the vicinity of the prison in searching for suspected persons. The aspect at dawn was most dismal. Nobody was permitted to walk the pavement around the prison. A few black figures passed through the deserted streets, and after an exchange of words with the soldiers crossed the square to the prison. These were detectives and journalists, who showed their credentials to the prison officials. Only the procurer, the judge, a notary and priest were allowed to enter the prison.

At 3 o'clock in the morning, from a prison window, not Sauto's, a prolonged sigh, followed by the cry, twice repeated, of "Vive L'anarchie," broke the stillness.

Just at this moment a wagon arrived at the prison with the guillotine, which was quickly put into place. At 4:50 Sauto was led out of his cell by the guards. The condemned man was obliged to walk a distance of fifty yards from his cell to the scaffold, which had been erected in the square facing the prison.

The crowd outside the lines at 3 o'clock was small, but from that time it quickly swelled until towards 4 o'clock, the time at which the execution was expected to take place, it had grown to large proportions.

When the preparations of Diebler had been completed he twice tested the guillotine and pronounced it satisfactory. It was then 4:55 o'clock. The troops then closed in around the guillotine.

When daylight arrived the square and the streets nearby were thronged with people. Diebler and his assistants doffed their working clothes and put on their coats of black. Then, escorted by a squad of gendarmes, the executioner and his men entered the prison. M. Raux, the governor of the prison, awakened Sauto, saying to him, "Courage, Sauto, the hour has arrived."

The condemned man with a great effort raised himself, his face turned livid and his hands and limbs trembled convulsively, despite his efforts to appear careless at his fate. This trembling continued until the last moment. He could hardly stand, and his limbs were so stiff with cold and fright that his clothes were put on him with the utmost difficulty.

In reply to the question of the governor whether he would have breakfast Sauto declined either food or drink. He also refused religious consolation from the priest.

Asked whether he desired to speak to the judge he replied in the negative. He also declined to see his counsel.

"Have you any last wishes to communicate?" he was asked. "No," he answered, "only send my letters to my mother."

When Governor Raux spoke to Sauto of his mother the condemned man convulsively, despite his efforts to appear careless at his fate. This trembling continued until the last moment. He could hardly stand, and his limbs were so stiff with cold and fright that his clothes were put on him with the utmost difficulty.

The assassin trembled as he emerged from the prison, and had to be assisted to the scaffold. His face was deadly pale. As he was being fastened down he cried "Vive L'anarchie!" Then, at 4:55, the glittering knife fell and the assassin's head dropped into the basket placed to receive it, and President Carnot was avenged. Sauto's death was instantaneous. There was no unusual demonstration.

The warrants were sworn out by Cornelius Place, the father of the children.

The men had just drawn their monthly salaries. The bandits escaped.
